BILL SUMMARY

This bill repeals current Article 16 (“Money Transmitters Act”) of Chapter 53 (Banking) and replaces it with new Article 16A, which is also entitled “Money Transmitters Act”. The bill would apply to persons licensed to engage in the business of money transmission in this State at one or more locations, directly or indirectly owned, or through authorized delegates. “Money transmission” in the bill is defined as (i) the sale or issuance of payment instruments or stored value, or (ii) the act of engaging in the business of receiving money or monetary value for transmission within the United States or to locations abroad by any and all means.

Some examples of businesses covered under the bill include non-bank entities that issue and sell checks, money orders, travelers' checks, or arrange for the transmission of money. The bill broadens its application to entities that have Internet sites, from a location inside or outside this state in which North Carolina citizens may access in order to enter into a money transmission transaction. On and after October 1, 2001, a license will be required from the Commissioner of Banks to engage in the business of money transmission within the state. Federal, state, and local governments are exempt, as are banks, credit unions, savings and loan associations, and for persons registered as a securities broker-dealer.

In addition, the bill stipulates license qualifications, permissible investments, application procedures and fees, and bonding requirements. Specifically, the net worth required of a licensee at all times is $100,000; and for licensees having more than one location they must have an additional net worth of $10,000 per location (not to exceed $500,000). Each application for license requires a $500 investigation fee, and $1,000 annual application fee plus $10 per location (location fee not to exceed $5,000).

Violations of the Article are enforceable by civil penalties of up to $1,000 per violation. The Act also creates two Class 1 misdemeanors – one for money transmission without a license, and the other for providing false statements with intent to deceive in filings. Any other violation of the Act is a Class 1 misdemeanor.

The bill creates new G.S. 53-208.25 that would allow the Commissioner to apply to the Wake County Superior Court for an order enjoining any person from violations and for injunctive or such other relief as the nature of the case may require if it appears to the Commissioner that a person has committed or is about to commit a violation of any provision of this Article or any rule or order of the Commissioner.

ASSUMPTIONS AND METHODOLOGY:

Banking Commission

The North Carolina Banking Commission reports that 41 companies are licensed as money transmitters. This bill will expand the Banking Commission's regulatory reach to Internet companies that do electronic transfers of money. However, this bill does not change the investigation and license fees charged by the Banking Commission. Commission officials are not able to estimate the number of firms that will be licensed by this act.

Department of Correction

These bills makes it a Class 1 misdemeanor for any person to knowingly and willfully make a false statement in any document filed or required to be filed under this Article with the intent to deceive the recipient of the document; or to knowingly and willfully engage in the business of money transmission without a license. Under current law, a violation of Article 16 is a Class 1 misdemeanor as well. The bill also broadens the scope of application to include entities with Internet sites that are accessible by North Carolina citizens.

Although the Sentencing Commission does not have any historical data from which to estimate how many offenders might be sentenced, Fiscal Research does not expect the proposed bill to have an impact on the prison population since violation is a Class 1 misdemeanor. In FY 1999/2000, 15% of Class 1 misdemeanor convictions resulted in active sentences. The average sentence length imposed was 45 days, and sentences under 90 days are served in county jails. While there is some chance an offender could be sentenced to jail under this statute, Fiscal Research estimates the charges would not be significant enough to impact the county jails.

Judicial Branch

The Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) indicates that they do not have available data to estimate the number of such charges under the proposed bill. Moreover, the AOC does not have an offense code for the current law, which indicates that relatively few charges are filed.

The AOC also indicates that while they might expect an increase in the workload of Wake County superior court judges as a result of new G.S. 53-208.25 under the bill, they do not have available data to estimate the number of such violations. Additionally, data are not available on the extent to which expanded civil penalties may affect the courts under the bill.

Fiscal Research expects that any increase in court workload from this one bill can be absorbed with existing resources.
